Annex 3

The ONE Campaign is a global advocacy and campaigning organization supported by more than 2 million people and growing, from all walks of life all around the world, uniting as one against extreme poverty.

We press for debt cancellation and for increased and more effective aid to fight extreme poverty, hunger, illiteracy, and diseases like AIDS. We promote trade reform so that people in the poorest countries can earn their way out of extreme poverty. And we promote democracy, accountability and transparency in developing countries so that their citizens are in the driving seat of progress, fighting corruption and holding their governments accountable.

In late 2007, ONE joined forces with DATA (Debt AIDS Trade Africa), an advocacy organization which has focused on holding accountable the governments of the world's industrialized nations for the commitments they have made to Africa, to help Africans put themselves on the path to long-term prosperity and stability.

At the core of ONE is the belief that these issues are not about charity, but about justice and equality. For the first time in human history, we have the science, the technology, and the resources to end extreme poverty. With this unprecedented opportunity comes the responsibility to act.

ONE is humbled by the determined efforts of those in developing countries who are leading this fight, as well as by those organizations which have long endeavored to end extreme poverty around the world. We hope that our campaign can find ways to lend our voice to help put wind at the backs of others who are part of this important global movement.
